Human Rights Defenders Scavenger Hunt: A Computer Lab Activity
By Devin Dwyer

Elaborated Lesson Focus

This lesson is designed to help students understand the breadth and significance of the global human rights movement. Using The Carter Center Human Rights Defenders website, students will explore the work of several human rights defenders, locate their work geographically and identify a current news story relating to human rights.

Georgia Performance Standards

SSCG7 The student will describe how thoughtful and effective participation in civic life is characterized by obeying the law, … participating in the political process, performing public service, … being informed about current issues, and respecting differing opinions.

SSCG6 The student will demonstrate knowledge of civil liberties and civil rights.
  e. Explain every citizen’s right to be treated equally under the law.

Enduring Understanding / Essential Questions

Human rights are the fundamental freedoms essential to living a full life. Regardless of one’s sex, race, ethnicity, national origin, economic status or sexual orientation, human rights belong to all people. Around the world, certain groups and individuals do not enjoy full realization of these rights. Individual defenders of human rights – part of a global movement for justice and equality – work passionately to uphold the neglected, victimized and ignored.

Procedure

Working individually at a computer, each student will complete the online Scavenger Hunt worksheet. Before students log-on and open a Web browser, review the definitions of human rights and human rights defenders with the group. Have students fill in the definitions on their worksheets.

Instruct students to complete the scavenger hunt by using the Web and starting at: www.cartercenter.org/defenders. Note: write this on a whiteboard or chalkboard. (Assessment – Worksheet Rubric)
